ABSTRACT

A method for taking advantage of external recognition to thereby render only those portions of a computer generated object that are visibly displayed to the user. Internal components and hidden components are omitted from the rendered image.